71.4%

71.4% of survivors interviewed for the Texas State Plan on Domestic Violence needed help finding housing. [1]

69%

69% of Texas Domestic Violence agencies said getting into permanent housing is a big problem for survivors. [1]

32.7%

32.7% of survivors interviewed for the State Plan needed help keeping their current housing. [1]

The need for housing spans across all groups seeking services, and is a scarce resource for those most in need. [2]

80%

80% of U.S. mothers with children experiencing homelessness have previously experienced domestic violence. [3]

90.1%

90.1% of survivors interviewed for the Texas State Plan experienced homelessness at least once after escaping domestic violence. [4]

45%

Over 45% had been homeless twice or more due to domestic violence. [4]

Not only do women leaving abuse experience homelessness as a direct result of leaving, they also are more likely to experience homelessness within the first year after separation. [5]
